Creating a Just Transition in Climate Change Policy

Vonda Brunsting, Initiative for Responsible Investment, Harvard University

As the world's economy responds to climate change and takes steps to pull back from fossil fuel dependency, of particular importance is that any action should work towards just and equitable solutions for citizens, workers, and communities. Join our speaker Vonda Brunsting as she outlines the philosophy of a just climate transition, and the practical steps we can take.

Vonda Brunsting is the Program Manager for The Just Transition Project. Before joining the IRI, she was the Director of the Capital Stewardship Program at Service Employees International Union (SEIU). Prior to her time with SEIU, Vonda worked as a community organizer in Chicago, New York, and Boston with the Industrial Areas Foundation. In addition, she co-founded the Trustee Leadership Forum for Retirement Security here at the IRI. She earned her B.A. from Calvin College and A.M. in Public Policy from the University of Chicago.
