

Garret Ellison is an environmental reporter for MLive Media Group. He has specialized in reporting on PFAS, or poly- and per-fluorinated chemicals, and their impact on Michigan residents. He broke the story of Nestle's request to pump more groundwater from Michigan for bottling, for which he was awarded the Public Notice Resource Center's Public Notice Journalism Award during a ceremony at the National Press Club. His extensive reporting on PFAS, Nestle as well as the controversial Line 5 oil pipeline under the Straits of Mackinac earned him the 2017 Journalist of the Year Award from the Michigan Press Association Foundation. He started his career as a business reporter for The Grand Rapids Press, MLive's largest newspaper, and has won awards for business reporting from both the Associated Press Media Editors and the Michigan Press Association. He teaches journalism classes at Grand Valley State University and holds his bachelor's degree from Central Michigan University.
